An Unfortunate Matter.

Last evening at the close of the play "Old Glory," by the Chase company, at Reed's, the usual drawing took place for the $5 prize. The young man whose name was first drawn out of the box was absent, hence a second draw was necessary, and the coin was awarded to the young man whose name was upon the second ticket. After the affair was all over, however, Mr. Chase accidentally discovered that a large number of tickets were in the box, bearing the same name, all written in the same hand, and all of which were fraudulently placed in the box. Mr. Chase saw the unfairness of this, and word was sent the young man to refund the money. He appeared promptly at the hotel this morning, and with a breaking heart explained to Mr. Chase how he had been induced to take the erring step, which he looked upon in the light of a joke, not realizing its dire conse- C.
